Press Release of the Game Designer Association

October 22, 2013

SAZ game designers have again been very successful in 2013

In 2013, game designers who are members of the Game Designer Association (Spiele-Autoren-Zunft; SAZ) have been very successful again. Even though not all results of the international awards and competitions are out yet, the outcome so far is impressive: 39 game designers have been able to obtain 77 prizes and nominations overall for 56 different games.

This proves the high quality with which these game designers were able to win over many competent juries. We are delighted at these accolades and will continue supporting the professionalization of our members and the representation of their rights. Within the scope of our GAMES ALSO HAVE AUTHORS campaign, we use this success message as another opportunity to bring game designers to the public's attention as creators and originators.

Attachment: success list (this information will be updated continually on our website until the end of the year)
